Royce Clark Scores Hole-in-one

Playing the ninth hole of the local golf course last Sunday morning, Royce Clark sank his tee shot for a hole-in-one. The distance on this hole is about 180 yards.

Crops Holding Up Well Under Heat

The Alberta crop report No. 6, issued by the agricultural extension service of the Department of Agriculture and dated July 24th, says that crop prospects are very satisfactory in district No. 4, which centres around Vulcan. The condition of the local crops is rated at good to excellent, with 70% of wheat in head and 45% of the coarse grains. Some hail damage is reported. Haying is progressing with good yield and quality. Estimated yield of fall rye is 30 bushels to the acre. Summerfallow is in fair to good condition and pasture growth is good.

Rain would be welcome in this district but most crops are standing up well to the heat. Some stubble crops are deteriorating.

Young Lad Drowns While Fishing at Lake McGregor

Tragedy at Lake McGregor during fishing party. Young lad is son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Reist of Westward Ho

A tragedy occurred at Lake McGregor on Friday, July 26th, when Lorne Reist, 12½-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Reist, of Westward Ho, met his death by drowning. The young boy had been visiting his uncle, Gordon Good, of Aldersyde. On Friday morning the family decided to go fishing to Lake McGregor, and arrived there about eleven o'clock in the forenoon. About 1.30 Lorne was standing fishing on a high bank, and there was no one in his immediate vicinity at that time. He must have slipped over the bank into the water, which was about 15 feet deep at that point. He was unable to swim.

Help was quickly secured from Milo, and only about 20 minutes elapsed before the body was recovered from the water, but all efforts at revival were unavailing. Dr. Carson and Const. Hearst, R.C.M.P., of Vulcan, were immediately summoned, as was the Jones ambulance of High River. The coroner, Dr. Carson, decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

Great sympathy is felt by the district for the bereaved family. Mr. and Mrs. Reist left this district about seven years ago to reside at Westward Ho. Besides the parents there are three sisters and a brother. Lorne and a sister had come south to holiday with their uncle, Mr. Good. He was a very fine young lad, of magnificent physique, well liked by everyone.

Funeral services were held from the Mountview Mennonite church on Monday, July 29th, at 2 p.m., with the Jones Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Funeral services were very largely attended, exceeding the capacity of the church, and drawing sympathetic friends from Westward Ho and many other distant points. Services were conducted by Rev. Ezra Stauffer of Tofield and Rev. C. J. Raymer of Duchess, assisted by Bishop Isaac Miller. Interment was in the Mountview cemetery, and pallbearers were Wilbur and Wilfred Stauffer, Roy Miller, Will Steckley, David Steckley and Delbert Harder of Carstairs.

Irrigation And Forest Growth

In No Province Are Irrigation And Forest Conservation So Closely Linked As in Alberta

When irrigation farmers look to the watershed of the East Slope of the Rockies as the source of virtually all of Alberta's rivers, one point is often overlooked. A forest-covered watershed at high altitudes receives far heavier precipitation than does a watershed at low altitudes. European scientific tests, accepted as authoritative by Canadian and American experts, show that precipitation is 43 per cent greater in mountain forests of 2,500 feet than in those at nearly sea level. The increase is as high as 84 percent at altitudes of 3,000 feet, and it must be remembered that Calgary's altitude is 3,500 feet, with about the same situation applying to the wooded zone at the base of Alberta's mountain valleys.

Another well-proven fact is that influence on conditions to a height forests, such as those of Alberta crowns of the trees. When one compares the precipitation falling upon a well-forested mountain slope or valley, it is often as much as 25 percent more than the precipitation on treeless mountain terrain.

The key to a reliable and increasing supply of water for irrigation and other purposes in Alberta is not only a question of the Rocky Mountains but of the condition of the forest resources that cover the lower mountain slopes. Irrigation joins hands with forest conservation as in no other province of Canada, and the upbuilding of the East Slope's mantle of woodlands becomes a subject of close interest to every one interested in irrigation.—Albrta Wheat Pool.

Pertinent Topics
Discussed by H.C.

Communist support of the government in the last elections may account for some of the things that the prosecution did not touch in any of the spy trials. It may account for the extraordinary procedure adopted by Order in Council, a process which the emergency committee has been attacking in full page advertisements in the daily press. We know who have been prosecuted; we don't know who were allowed to escape without being charged. We don't know by what means some of those convicted were enabled to secure positions which they could use to get information for the Soviet Embassy.

The Prime Minister himself has been curious enough to inquire through what influence a woman of Russian descent, a constituent of his in Prince Albert, got a position in his own Department of External Affairs from which she relayed confidential information to Russia. Communist support was valuable to the government but it may not have been all one-way traffic.

In rejecting Communist offers to join the C.C.F., Mr. Coldwell may have been influenced by the example of the British Socialist party. Mr. King, however, had learned to respect the organizational and vote-getting ability of the Communists as displayed in the plebiscite. Those who expected conscription to be snowed under had not reckoned with the fact that Russia was in the war by that time and that her friends, hostile or lukewarm before, would be Red-hot now. They were out to help Russia even though it meant helping Britain.

They changed the result from a defeat of conscription to a victory for it. So when Mr. Buck announced his intention to help out the government, Mr. King, unlike Mr. Coldwell, did not object; neither did his followers. In the bye-election in North Grey, the Communists supported the then Defence Minister, General MacNaughton, and in the general elections following they supported the government except in a few ridings where they had candidates of their own.

While the process adopted served to uncover 18 persons and commit them to stand trial one cannot be sure that it did not also serve to conceal as well as to reveal. Outside of Fred Rose, M.P., those standing trial were only civil servants. Who was the person so influential with the government as to be able to secure places in External Affairs, munitions, research laboratories, War Information, radio, aviation, invention and other branches where secrets could be obtained for the spy ring?

Mr. King stressed the point that they were mostly temporary servants taken on during the war. When it was over, however, hundreds of other temporary servants were dropped but these remained. Whose was the influence that got them in and kept them on while they were serving a foreign state? Under the commission set-up, the influential higher-ups could be protected, and that rather than a desire to abrogate Magna Carta may have been the real cause for giving such extraordinary power to the commission.

There are agencies operating in Canada far more useful to Soviet Russia than the clerks in prison or about to stand trial. Their work can be seen in films; their voices may be heard over the radio in praise or defence of Russia and in dispraise or disparagement of Britain. Muted now are the voices that came from pulpits and college halls but the big daily newspaper, The Toronto Star, still defiantly espouses the government at Moscow while keeping an ace in the hole by continuing its support of the government at Ottawa.

Bennett Speaks For Canada

Viscount Bennett spoke up suggesting that Canada be given right to make her own constitutional changes, when the second reading of the British North America bill came up before the House of Lords.

He suggested the British government at the earliest opportunity should discuss with Canada the question of conferring upon the Dominion by legislation power to deal with its own constitutional changes.

Lord Bennett said the Westminster statute provided that no act passed by the British parliament would have effect in Canada or any other dominion unless it was extremely declared that the dominion concerned had requested and consented to it.

This could be implied in the bill before the lords, said Lord Bennett but it was desirable to make plain that the British parliament assumed no responsibility for the legislation. It should also be clear that it was being passed with the consent and at the request of the Canadian parliament.

Alcoholics Anonymous has established a best home and centre in Edmonton, under free lease from the provincial government. It is the first rest home operated by the group in Canada.

Two young men near Peace River were fined $40 and costs for insisting that a dance close with "O Canada" instead of "God Save the King." William Henry, one of the young men said he was not a British subject but a Canadian. They were charged with creating a disturbance.

HAVE ME ALL TIED UP!

It takes a lot of varied materials to make extensions to power lines. There's poles and cross arms, hardware and insulators, and most important of all, wire. And the trouble is that we can't get anywhere near enough of ANY of those things. In spite of everything we can do to speed up delivery, the supplies we are receiving are far from sufficient to meet the requests we now have for power extensions.

If you are one of the many who are waiting for such an extension, we want you to know that we are eager to serve you and ready to do so the moment we receive the materials required.

Hansell Would Hush Jute Box

Comes to support of those who crave quiet in restaurants. Would gladly pay tax to stop horrific noise

E. G. Hansell, M.P., is a frequent speaker in the House of Commons, and is not as often quoted in this paper as he should be. However, his declaration in parliament the other day re juke boxes wins him three rousing cheers from quite an element of Canadian people—all those who enjoy peace and quiet during their meals.

Mr. Hansell said: "Whenever I go to a restaurant to eat a meal somebody is bound to drop a nickel into the juke box and blare into my ears some of our western culture, some of our American culture. Let the minister put a little gadget on these machines so that the rest of us that do not like it can drop in a nickel that will turn the thing off. That is one tax that I should be glad to pay."

Acting Finance Minister Abbott: "I am glad to hear that, because we have taxed both the machine and the fellow who wants to turn it on."

Mr. Hansell: "Then you will get us coming both ways. You now are getting the tax from the one who wants the culture and you will get a tax from the cultured gentlemen who do not want it."

Mr. Hansell's suggestion should be tried out by the government from the standpoint of relative profit. As things are now, the juke box is silent till some one drops in a nickel to start it making noises. Everyone within some distance is exposed to that noise, and if those who like juke noise want also to converse they just turn the juke louder so that it can roar above their voices. Those who crave silence are left swooning in a horrific bedlam.

Now suppose the juke boxes were geared to turn out music all the time and were only silenced by inserting a nickel, would profits be greater or less? That is a bit of research that should be widely explored. Who has the most nickels — the staid people who loathe unnecessary noise at meal times, and who enjoy a little quiet conversation with a table companion, or the giddier element that considers greater and more rasping noises as evidence of good times and the full life?

Mr. Hansell's proposal of a gadget that would bring silence by depositing a nickel still leaves something to be desired. It might result in still more diabolic situations at restaurants. There would be a flood of nickels into the juke box, but no assurance of either peace or noise. There would be two bars of screech, then a minute's silence, then more noise, till someone could find a nickel to choke it off.

No, it looks as if the juke designers should canvass the customers to find out what proportion is for or against, and then gear the damned things to suit the majority.

No. 5 E.F.T.S. To Be Dismantled

From reports in the daily papers it is understood that No. 5 E.F.T.S., High River, is to be dismantled along the same lines as DeWinton airport with priority for veterans. The actual breakdown process has not yet started at the school but a number of people have been out looking over the buildings and materials up for sale with a view to putting in bids.

So far as can be learned all transactions are carried on through the Provincial Disposal Board at Edmonton, on the same principle as has been carried out at DeWinton and other airports.

12 Man Jury vs. 6 Man Jury

In debating the question of juries in the House of Commons, and the provision to be made for a 12 man jury in Saskatchewan, A. L. Smith, K.C. of Calgary, contributed his ideas on juries, pointing to an extraordinary situation prevailing in Alberta. He said: "I would like to refer to the question of challenging. Last fall I defended a young man charged with murder. He was convicted. In the province of Alberta, I was allowed to exercise six challenges while the crown had, in effect, forty or fifty. They have so many challenges and so many stand-asides, as we call them, that it runs to the figure of forty-six. During vacation I appealed the verdict and a new trial was ordered. My brother defended the same chap and he was acquitted.

"But in that case as in all other cases we used our six challenges. It means that the crown just looks over the remainder of the panel and takes anyone he wishes. I think it a terrible comment on the administration of justice that a man charged with murder in Alberta has six challenges and the crown has forty odd. It means they select whomsoever they want. I raised the point with the minister last fall and I know that he has made some inquiries out there. I know that they did. They circulated a questionnaire to the benchers of the law society. The point is this, they were not men who knew anything about criminal law or had any experience whatever with it. They thought perhaps it might be all right. I do not suppose the attorney-general wants to alter. I am not so keen on the twelve-man jury. We have had a six man jury ever since we have had juries and to my mind a sixman jury works just as well no matter which side you are on.

"I suggest to the minister that when a person is accused, without anybody being consulted, of the most serious of all crimes, namely murder, in Alberta, the law should put him in the same position as he would be in in any other part of Canada. Out there we are standing alone in that miserable position Every other province permits twenty challenges. It seems to me that this parliament should not wait longer to rectify a state of affairs unjustified from any point of view.

"This originates with the North-west Territories Act. It was fixed up for Saskatchewan, but for some reason we were left out on the end of the limb where we have remained ever since. It can be changed with the addition of three or four words. Just put Alberta in the same position as all other people in Canada. I think all honorable members will agree that it is not right to have a man charged in one province and put in an inferior position to that in which he would be if he were charged in Saskatchewan or B.C"

Minister of Justice St. Laurent: "I fully agree that provisions for trial of a man charged with murder should be the same in all provinces, and will endeavor to have parliament do something about it at this session."

Fingerlings For Local Streams

Nearly half a million yearling trout, measuring from three or four inches, to eight or ten inches in length will be taken from rearing ponds within the next few weeks and placed in Southern Alberta streams. Willow Creek will receive 40,000; 50,000 will go into the Highwood River; 40,000 into South Sheep Creek, 100,000 into the Bow River tributaries and 100,000 into Elbow River tributaries.

Alberta coal has advanced 90 cts. a ton in Ontario.

Present British ration of sugar is half pound a week, with candy half oz. a week. An extra pound of sugar per person will be allotted on Sept. 15.

At the last session of legislature $500,000 was voted for new agricultural schools in Alberta. Lethbridge is advancing the benefits of using the Prisoner of War camp for this purpose.

Farm Implement Shortage Worst Ever Say Dealers

Due to Last Winter's Steel Strike Implement Dealers Find Situation Worse Than Ever Before. Urge Early Purchase Needed Parts

According to implement dealers the machinery shortage at present prevailing is the worst that has ever existed. This shortage in filling requirements is heightened by the fact that one of the biggest crops on record is in prospect. Supplies in sight, particularly in respect to combines, pick-ups and such harvest equipment are totally inadequate. In fact one dealer says that there is scarcely hope of getting one-tenth of the equipment called for.

This situation is largely the aftermath of the steel strikes of last winter, with manufacturing companies held up in all normal production by the strike.

So bad is the situation that dealers fear there will be difficulty even in securing necessary parts which in past years have been reasonably obtainable. They urge that all their customers requiring parts get their orders in early. Otherwise they may be caught in mid-harvest.

With present crop prospects, dealers in machinery would have done a tremendous business this year. There is buying power in the country, and there has been great general depletion during war years with replacement lagging far behind actual needs. There is world need for safe harvesting of every bushel of the current crop. The bread rationing which has been found necessary in many countries is proof of the importance of the 1946 harvest from world standpoint. From all over the west come reports of fair to heavy crops in prospect. And from all over the west is call for equipment to get the grain off in proper time.

The position in which dealers and farmers now find themselves is directly the responsibility of the steel strikes of last winter.

Joe Migilsji of Beach Corner, Alberta won the $15.000 grand prize in the Dominion day draw of Kimberley Memorial Society.
